Speed Dating Dataviz project

Baigalmaa BAATAR
19 juin 2020
Jedha Bootcamp
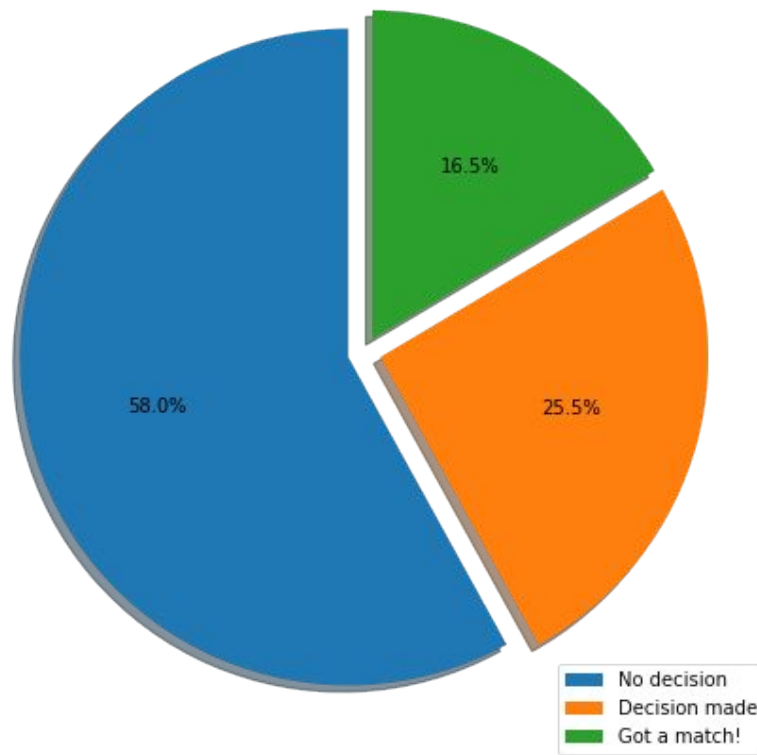

Who's got match?

Only 16.5%'s got match!

42% made a decision but fewer than half got a match.

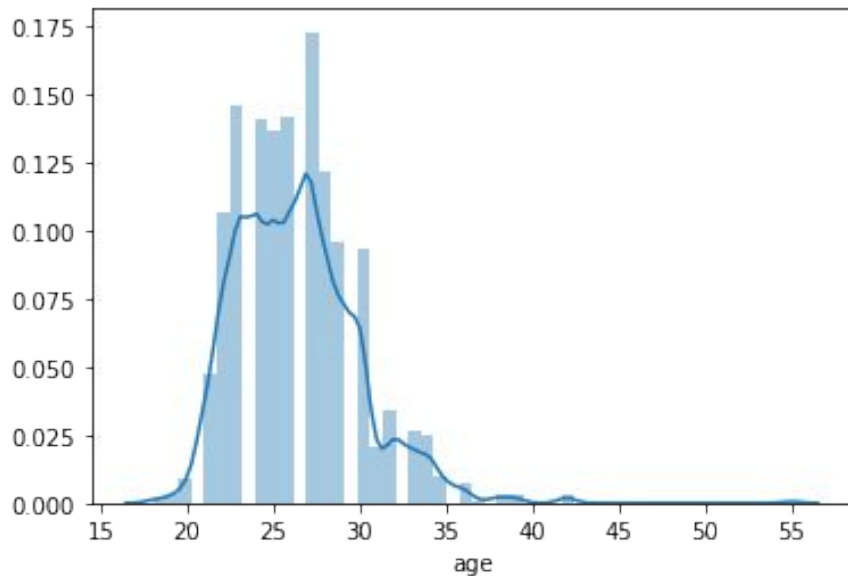

How much people got match

- No decision
- Decision made
- Got a match!

Who participated in this study?

Let's look at age distribution. In this study, people who are in twenties and early 20's participated.

How happy do you expect to be with the people you meet during the speed-dating event?

Out of 10, people are being little optimistic giving 5-7 scores that they would be happier!

How we rate ourselves vs how others rate us

We have higher opinion about ourselves! Being overconfident?

#Would like to see how this scores would change in Asian countries.

How we rate ourselves vs how expect others would rate us

It was ALMOST same rating as how we rated us.

Hmm we want to believe that we are attractive as we think?!

Who volunteered in study?

Students who are majored in Business, Economy, Finance seems MOST interested in dating.

BioScience, Chemistry, Physics would like to have a match!!

But students who will going to be filmmakers, linguistists, mathematicians are less interested, hmm.
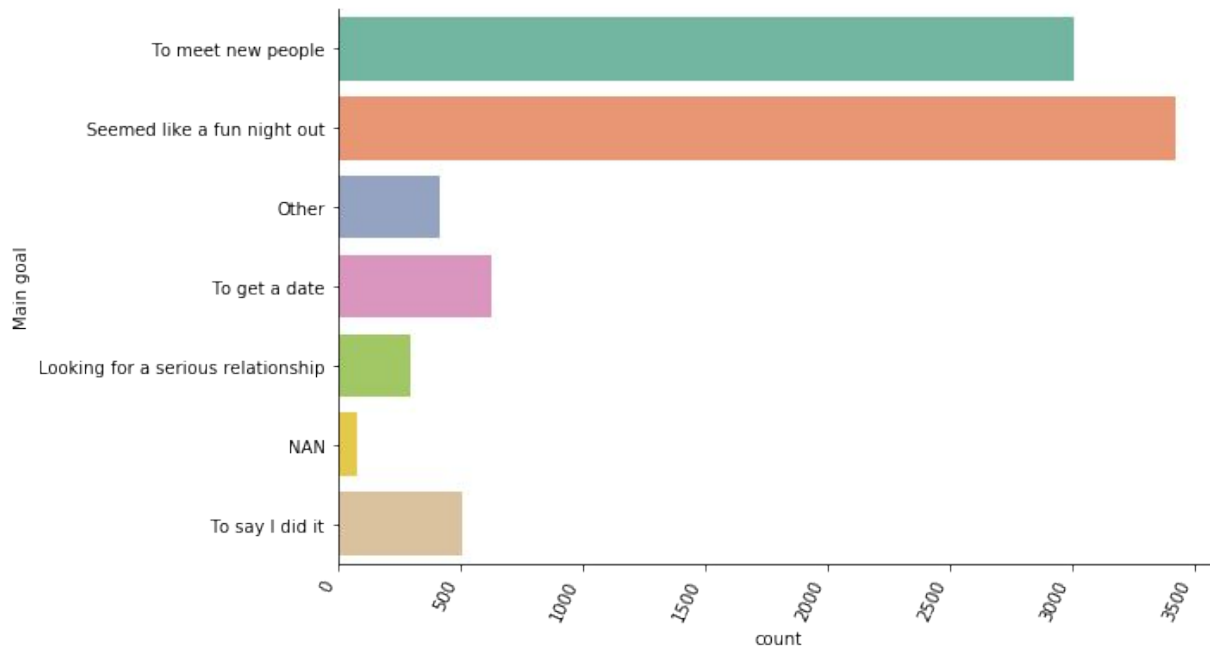

Who got match?

Social scientists got match expected than higher.

What is the goal of meeting?

They are not looking for serious relationship from this Speed Dating.
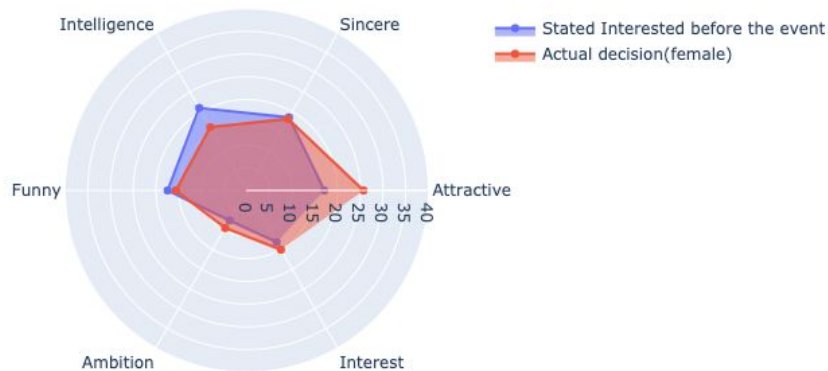

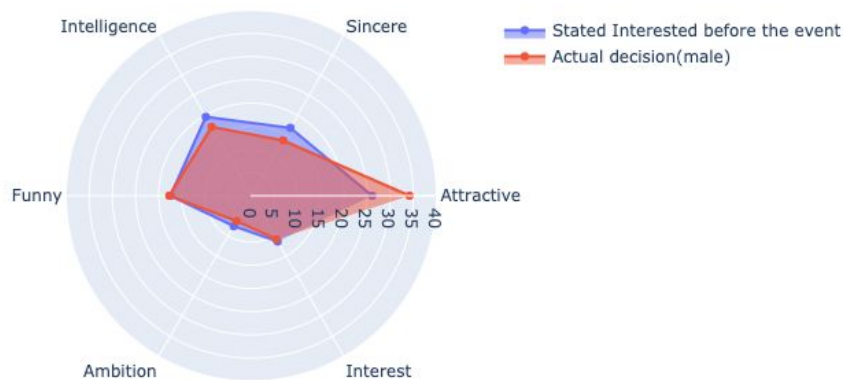

Who is got second date according to hobbies?

If you like eating, reading, movies, music you will probably get a Second Date!!

But if you like TV sports, Gaming, TV you have less probability of getting match!

Stated interest compared to actual decision

Most of participants chose more Attractive partners than stated previously.

Conclusion

People

- Rate themselves highly than rated by others
- Wish others would rate as they rate
- Interested more in attractiveness(looks) than other attributes

If you

- Majored in Business, Economy, Social Science you have chance to get a Second Date
- Like Eating, Reading, Movies, Music you likely to have Second Date

Love is difficult, if it was easy, there would be no broken heart :)